The 62-floor high tower, the tallest building in Doha, Qatar, consists of medium-long term rental apartments located in the tower, public areas in the podium and SPA and wellness center in the first floor. The design of the apartments, especially Triplex and "Sky-Villas" involved the research of balance between luxury requirements, European style high-end hotels and the local traditions of the Gulf.

At the entrance hall, the theme of the Arabic courtyard "sahn" with a central fountain and "musharabiya" windows looking into it from different levels is blended with more contemporary elements such as the composition of space through the subtraction of pure volumes, the use of modern material such as white painted stainless steel and the use of high technologically lighting system, which consists of RGB light sources originating behind "mushrabiya" producing a very rich and delicate shadowed effect. The theme of "musharabiya" is thus re-elaborated and articulated in an elegant texture composition.

Other public areas such as the restaurant introduce new local themes created with privacy using warm materials.
